GIVES COHN A ROASTING.

Cohn-No. I was overlooked.

HE HAD AN INVITATION.

McKay-Well, I got one. It did not come to me, but one of the boys who received one turned it over to me. I called the attention of this board to it. I suggested that the place be closed. I called attention to the character of the woman who was running the place and cited the board to the fact that in the last year she had paid monthly fees in the way of forfeits into the city treasury. Two members of the board told the chief to close her up. A reporter afterwards told me no atempt was made to close the house; that all that was done was to see that the dance didn't proceed. If such things go on you cannot blame the Municipal league, it is the duty of the authorities to see to it that the ordinances are enforced at least in a reasonable way.

POLICY SHOPS. HE HAD AN INVITATION.

POLICY SHOPS. "I don't know of my own knowledge that a policy shop is running in this city. They may be; doubtless are, but if they are, we have a police force competent to take care of them. It is better now than it has been in vears. There are no bickerings, no quarrels, and the chief is competent to enforce his authority. He is a good man and will execute the orders you give him. We hadn't that kind of a chief before. We had a man who would do just as he pleased and there were just as many houses of ill fame, as many policy shops and as many gambling houses as he saw fit to permit." "I don't know of my own knowledge he saw fit to permit."

At this point Cohn interjected a remark to the effect that the drift of the city attorney's remarks was to lay all the blame for these conditions on him.

PUT EM ALL IN. "Well, I will put the other members of the commission in with you, and does that relieve you? Does it make your position any better? You are not in favor of closing them up; neither is Mr. Noble. You both maintain that it would be bad business policy. You have so expressed yourself. So has he I believe if you will send or go to the gamblers who run what are known as the 'square houses' and tell them to shut their doors they will shut them. It will not take as many officers to close will not take as many officers to close them as it does to protect them."

THE TRIBUNE A LIAR.

"But the whole milk in the cocoanut is that the Tribune could not control the appointments of the members of this board. If the Tribune—I say Tribune because I do not want to be personal--could have dictated the appoint-ment on this commission they would ment on this commission they would not have cared a d-n how the city was run. They have lied about the mayor, they have lied about the city attorney; they have lied about Dininny and they have lied about Grant.

Cohn—Well, I do not believe we hadbetter go into this matter any deeper.

SAYS PRATT GAMBLED.

McKay-Well, I do: I want to go into it. I want to show the real causes for all this hullabaloo. I tell you that I don't believe the present chief of police sits up all night gambling, as did his predecessor. That fact, sir, was shown in evidence. It was shown that he and his captain of police sat up all night and gambled. It was shown that members of the commission rented rooms. and gambled. It was shown that mem-bers of the commission rented rooms for immoral purposes. The commission ought to have removed the chief with all the evidence it had, but it didn't. It was a four-headed body and would have stood by Fratt although hell itself yawned.

Cohn-But you do not accuse me of being a member of the board at the time.

McKay-No. I believe you were not. You escaped that,

DININNY HEARD FROM.

DININNY HEARD FROM.

Here McKny coased, and Dininny took the floor. He maintained that the editorial compinined of was an attempt to boister up a friend of the owner of the Tribune, who had been killed off by its efforts. Dininny then proceeded to discuss the editorial at some length. He deciared that when it was stated that Proft suppressed cylis, the writer was a liar and knew he was a liar. When it intimated the board are naturers in gambling, it was a lie, and the writer knew it was a lie when he wrote it. In fact, everything in the article was a lie, and the author, whom he did not know, was a liar and knew he was penning untruths when he placed the suff on paper. The speaker declared he knew of no parliamentary language which would fit the case. The Tribune had attempted to blacked the character of himself and Commissioner Gram. How it could accume him of being interested, without a scintilla of evidence, he could not say, He had nover been inside of a gambling house in the city; nover played a card for money.

HIS COMPLIMENTS TO THE TRIBUNE

"It is proper for me to say that I never was approached by anyone who wanted to run a gambling house, with the exception of Nigger Wilson, this man on the reservation, who came to me for advice when he was in doubt as to whether he was in the city or not. I told him I did not know, and he inquired what would be done with him if he was. My reply was that he would be aumished, as he should be, if he was running an unlawful house. As for policy, I know nothing of the game and am not now, nor never wais interested in the same. The paper which traduces me holds itself up as a family newspaper, with a large circulation, and yet it fills its columns from day to day with rot. Now, I do not care a den what they say about me or my actions. I am doing what I believe to be right, and so long as I think I am right, I shall continue if no one endorses my actions. I may be wrong, but if so, and I believe I am right, I shall not swerve. In relation to the house on Commercial street, we sgreed that it should be closed for that one night, and it was closed. The ball which was advertised was not permitted to take place. I make these statements, any newspaper reporter to the contrary notwithstanding." HIS COMPLIMENTS TO THE TRIBUNE

GRANT SPEAKS.

Mr. Grant took occasion to make a few remarks, although he had intended to say nothing. He was prepared to say that he was going ahead as he had done, without regard to anyone. If the league wanted the law enferred, he would assist in every way to enforce it. But as far as his being concerned in any sambling, the man who made an assertion of this kind was an unmitigated and unqualified liar and the truth did not have an abiding place in his composition.

The commission then took a vote on the resolution. Dinning and Grant voted are and Cohn voted aye, with the reservation that he was opposed to clause four.

THEN THEY CUIT.

THEN THEY CUIT.

The commission did a little business in addition. It decided to ask the members of the league to call and meet with it on Monday evening next. It was also thought best to have letters written to the members of the league and the officers but the secretary was saved this work by the suggestion that the meeting would be very well advertised in the memers this morning. And there the gambling, pool room, house of ill fame action ceased.

The commission did a little work in the ordinary line. The chief was granted permission to change a couple of police pa-

IT MATERIALLY SIMPLIFIES MATTERS FOR THE VOTER.

Will Enable Scratching Without Much Danger of Wasting the Ticket-Preparing the Statutes For the Printers.

When the intelligent voter next goes to the polls in this city, county and state, he will not vote the same kind of ballot as that used at the last election. The code commission made a legislature adopted the same, it being made a part of the act on elections, made a part of the act on elections, which was passed as an emergency act and at the same time incorporated in the code.

The ballot used at the last election was one which would easily deceive the voter and its form was such as to excite universal condemnation by those who had to use it. The code commission decided that it would perfect a new ballot and as a result the following has been adopted:

Republican Democratic Ticket. For President For President Wm. McKinley. Wm. J. Bryan. O

And so on down the line. An x in the circle under the presidential nominees means that the voter is voting a straight party tieket. If the voter wishes to scratch any name on any tieket he or she can do so and write the name of the party for whom it is desired to vote in the blank column on the right hand side of the blank column on the right hand side of the blank. On the old ballot the voter had to be very careful in voting a mixed ticket lest ne lose his vote by not placing the x in the right place. This year by scratching the name of the person he does not desire to vote for and placing an x opposite the name of a candidate for a similar position on the other ticket fixes matters all right; or the voter can scratch all the names and vote for a man whose name is not on the ticket at all.

voter can scratch all the names and vote for a man whose name is not on the ficket at all.

This matter was carefully gone over by the commission; several forms from other states examined with a view as to their adaptability, and the above decided aron as the very best.

In this connection it may be noted that the party emblem will have a place directly underneath the title of the ticket. And when it comes time for the voter to mark his ballot this fall, while he cannot "Mark an X up by the rooset, and let it fo at that," he can "Mark an X right below the rooset and let it go at that," and all will be well.

Secretary Barker, of the code revision commission, is a busy man these days being engaged in preparing the statutes, as revised and re-enacted at the recent session of the legislature, for the printers, it will require considerable type to print the report as amended and passed. There will be 37,322 words, old and new laws combined in the code revision there are 28,314 words and in the new laws 13,068. This is a saving of nearly 15,000 words over the acts of the legislature, as passed. It will be remembered that the enacting clause and title are not printed in the revision.

The commission is going to put the work in one volume, which will be somewhat after the style adopted by the code commission of Vermont. The volume of Vermont statutes contains 28,255 words. Utah has 1,001 words of pure statutes to Vermont $27, the proportions being that much. Utah has $18 words to North Dakota's 286. The number of pages of the index have not yet been figured out, but the work will be done in the next few days.
